Ben LaGuer, 48, has been claiming actual innocence for a quarter of a century. LaGuer grew up in New York and Puerto Rico until the age of 15 when he moved to Massachusetts with a sister; he grew up in a Seventh Day Adventist family. He attended high school in Leominster; elected president of Latino Student Body. He was a member of the Drama class. He dropped out in late 1979 to join the Army's elite 82nd Airborne Division, and later served in Germany. LaGuer was disciplined for being present when a soldier sold a $20 cube of hashish.¹ In June 1983 he was honorably discharged. He filled out college applications.

On the morning of July 13, 1983, his neighbor was discovered bound and beaten. Her physician noted "her assailant told her that he would kill her if she told what he looked like but she denies knowing her assailant." While heavily narcotized at hospital, police asked her to pick out "anybody she knew" from a photo array. She selected her neighbor. On July 15th he was charged with her assault.

On January 17, 1984, LaGuer was offered a plea bargain that paroled him in July 16, 1985. His attorney confirmed this fact to the parole board, having "reviewed my notes related to the trial."² The trial began Tuesday and ended Friday between 24-27 January 1984. Jurors deliberated from 3:25 pm until 4:45 pm on Friday, then Monday from 10:11 until reaching a guilty verdict at 11:53 am. He was sentenced to life. The Parole Board has repeatedly denied him release based on his refusal to admit guilt.

On 28 April 2011, a ninth motion for new trial was filed on behalf of Ben LaGuer. As with all his previous motions for a new trial based on withheld evidence, he promptly reported all of his discoveries. No court has ever sanctioned him for sandbagging evidence. Since his current motion is necessary because of a ninth instance of prosecutors withholding key evidence, any suggestions that he's gaming the system is unfair. Had prosecutors first provided all exculpatory evidence pretrial, as they should have, the verdict would have been different. His first motion for a new trial, in 1985, surely would have enjoyed greater substantive merit.

A panoply of withheld evidence shed new light on the analytical assumptions of Forensic Science Associates (FSA.) DNA testing did not clear him, as it should have, because FSA matched his DNA to samples taken from his apartment – not from the original rape kit.³

Annie K. DeMartino,⁴ a former mental health aide, has disclosed a previously undisclosed relationship between complainant and third party suspect Jose Orlando Gomez; her use of antipsychotic pharmaceuticals and; her indiscriminately (falsely) accusing other colored men of the same disputed offenses. (Ms. DeMartino is the recipient of many awards, including a Governor's award for public service and ABC News has twice named her "Person of the Week", first with Peter Jennings in 1987, then Sam Donaldson in 1989.)

These notes confirm...that such a sentence would have made Mr. LaGuer eligible for parole after two years, and that Mr. LaGuer would be credited for the time he had already served...I conveyed this offer to Mr. LaGuer. Mr. LaGuer was unwilling to plead guilty, contending he was innocent of the crimes charged."); John Strahinich Boston Magazine of October 1987 (Ben LaGuer "could have walked out of prison in July 1985.") According to the trial prosecutor, then Worcester County Assistant District Attorney James R. Lemire,⁵ complainant had been free of antipsychotic drugs for roughly two years. The appellate courts held her psychiatric history as too remote in time as to be relevant. In 2003, Elizabeth Barry averred her mother was diagnosed as a schizophrenic and institutionalized in the 1950s. In 2007 DeMartino revealed that complainant was administered antipsychotics at the time of trial, including Haloperidol.

Leominster Police Detective Ronald N. Carignan claimed that complainant inculpated LaGuer in a July 14, 1983 hospital bedside interview. (She denied in her trial testimony Carignan's account) In fact, 24 hours earlier, the building manager had provided Carignan a detailed socioeconomic briefing on LaGuer. In April 2001, withheld police reports depicted LaGuer as "a possible suspect" in a residential burglary and a second involving a domestic disturbance. These reports are what led Carignan to LaGuer's apartment.⁶

Carignan averred in his report,⁷ warrant⁸ and trial testimony⁹ that "nothing" was taken during a search of LaGuer's apartment. Lemire had assured the court that a drawer of tube socks in LaGuer's bedroom was not seized.¹⁰ All false. In May 2000 a Massachusetts state police crime laboratory (MSPCL) evidence inventory revealed "eight" tube socks and "underclothes from suspect" linked to LaGuer's apartment.¹¹ The inventory also revealed a jersey LaGuer had on the day of his arrest.¹² With MSPCL 2001 affidavit,¹³ FSA congregate DNA from "3 hairs" of a "yellow pullover" with other specimens to create a usable DNA profile.¹⁴ But, the "yellow pullover" is a truncated of the "yellow cotton jersey" with "3 hairs" that LaGuer had at the police station. These hairs, in 2000, had DNA.¹⁵

The May 2000 MSPCL inventory is salient insofar as senior case supervisor Gwen Boisvert Pino found three (3) slides wrapped in a brown paper towel with the markings of pubic hairs, hairs from yellow pullover and hairs from green pillow. She re-wrapped the slides again with tamper-proof tape. Pino's inadvertent mingling of what was actually LaGuer's jersey/pullover hairs with Plante's pubic hairs was catastrophic. Carignan's misleading claims led a MSPCL technician not to preserve each hair according to its true discovery location. If Pino could not tell apart real from pilfered evidence with all of her wealth of experience in May 2000, no greater proficiency could be made of Mark T. Grant, the twenty-two-year-old assistant chemist who held only a bachelor's degree in chemistry and a master's degree in business administration.

Grant recovered biological evidence from the "interior crotch" of LaGuer's underpants.¹⁶ On May 17, 1989, a trooper had two (2) of panties and LaGuer's underpants.¹⁷ However, five days later, Lemire presented in Court only her panties; “These are the two underpants that were listed in the report, in the lab report, as far as any underpants that’s in the evidence box.”¹⁸ Judge Mulkern concluded: “The only underwear in this case consist of two pairs of clearly feminine underwear found at the victim’s apartment.”¹⁹ In July 1998, ADA Sandra Wysocki requested “also Benjie’s underwear” from the local police.²⁰ ADA Sandra L. Hautenen testified on 22 April 2010, “obviously, there was men’s underwear in this case” contradicting further Lemire’s earlier claim that none existed.²¹

The attempt to conceal these articles, embarrassing for Carignan given that neither were mentioned in the warrant,²² did not negatively impact LaGuer until the defense began assessing each piece.²³ In January 2000, the court docket of his case had 85 entries spanning his August 1983 arraignment, pretrial discovery, jury trial, seven complex motions for a new trial and other appeals. By the time FSA had a 0.03 nanostain matching LaGuer, in March 2002, the docket had 150 entries. Despite this extraordinary legal activity, the deception made it difficult to establish a proper chain of custody. For example, Mark T. Grant recognized in May 2000 a number of articles he tested in October 1983. He was not asked if the MSPCL stockpile was a depository of physical evidence collected from LaGuer’s jersey, hairs, tube socks, underpants and underclothes.

Surely, LaGuer had no knowledge of this effort to conceal his underclothes. The failure of prosecutors to disclose this key fact left FSA baffled. On September 27, 2001, Ed Blake of FSA told the Telegram, “This is very difficult evidence, there’s no question about it.” On February 15, 2002, after a blood specimen previously cited as inculpatory LaGuer was genetically linked to complainant, defense lawyer David M. Siegel told the Boston Globe “It is but one more finding in a case that feels more and more like something out of ‘Alice in Wonderland.’”

FSA developed a DNA profile of what came to be accepted as the culprit’s genetic identity. But the samples used to create this profile were previously mingled with LaGuer’s pilfered hairs, tube socks, underpants and underclothes. The rape kit held no inculpatory DNA, so these specimens played no part in amplifying the DNA profile.²⁴ “Since no spermatozoa and no male DNA was recovered from the Plante vaginal/rectal swabs, this evidence is not relevant to the genetic information of Plante’s assailant.”²⁵ The Q-Tip swab used to transfer her pubic hairs

20 In a July 8, 1998 letter to Lt. Michele D. Pellecchia of the Leominster Police, disclosed in April 2001, Sandra Wysocki wrote: “I am particularly interested in items 15 to 18 on the attached Lab report dated November 3, 1983 from the Department of Public Safety.” (These items correspond to the rape kit.) The lab report is scribed with “also Benjie’s underwear” next to “underpants – suspect.”

22 The Search Warrant for Ben LaGuer’s apartment authorized Carignan to seize only these specific items: “Straw pocketbook with personal papers, and US currency, approximately $12.00, 2 Silver rings one with a turquoise stone, all the property of Lennice Plante. 1 tube sock with black and yellow stripes to match one left behind in the Plante apt.”

23 National Research Council, The Evaluation of Forensic DNA Evidence Report 82 (1996) (emphasizing that “given the great individuating potential of DNA evidence and the relative ease with which it can be mishandled or manipulated by the careless or unscrupulous, the integrity of the chain of custody is of paramount importance.”) yielded no blood or sperm fractions.²⁶ Put differently, LaGuer's DNA was never matched to DNA either from her body or crime scene recovered evidence.

ADA Hautanen argued in April 2010 that LaGuer's jersey hairs could not have contaminated the DNA because FSA never had a single strand on its workstations.²⁷ The contaminating event occurred either in May 2000, when Pino repackaged slides of Plante's pubic hair in the same brown paper towel as hairs recovered from LaGuer's jersey or, October 1983, when Grant first jumbled the samples FSA used with LaGuer's pilfered hairs, tube socks, underpants and underclothes.²⁸ "I might run two or three cases at once in order to save time." Grant had no manual on the handling of forensic samples.²⁹ Dr. Daniel L. Hartl of Harvard, says, "If it is correct that articles taken from LaGuer and/or from his bedroom were mislabeled and mixed together with actual samples taken directly from the victim, then the DNA evidence is of no value, even if the samples were mixed by mistake."³⁰

Since no individual sample had sufficient DNA for a usable genotype, following a court order, FSA congregated nanoparticles in a Frankensteinian stain.³¹ DNA was recovered neither from Plante's body nor from crime scene evidence. This stain weigh less than 0.03 billionth of a gram.³² Lawrence Kobilinsky, of John Jay College says, "The minuscule level of DNA the FSA report relies for its conclusions is of an amount that could be consistent with contamination."³³ (Donald D. Riley of the University of Washington says, "If you shine a flashlight at night in a darkened room, you will see these little dust particles. Most of those weigh a lot more than a billionth of a gram.")³⁴

The charges of evidence tampering and contamination stems from prosecutor first accusing lawyers of improperly accessing the courthouse storage.³⁵ The defense then accused prosecutors of trying to include specimens of dubious origins.³⁶ To create an aura of forensic integrity, Blake is kept in the dark about these epic feuds.³⁷ Blake had earlier said, “You do the work blindly, you publish the work blindly—before you do the reference samples—then you do the reference samples. And the guy’s either in or he’s out.”³⁸

It was not until LaGuer began to publicly defend himself against the inculpatory result that Blake first heard of these feuds.

In his March 2002 Telegram interview, Blake unwittingly put his finger on the key issue: “If this ‘frame job’ was evident in the police reports,” Blake asked rhetorically, “why did he waste David Siegel’s time for three years?”³⁹ Blake no doubt expected to be alerted of any chain of custody integrity issues. “The time to make those claims was on Day One,” Blake said, expanding on his obvious frustration: “If this is concocted thing, why did we spend all this time and effort on concocted evidence? It’s only concocted because Mr. LaGuer didn’t like the result of the testing.”⁴⁰ Blake added, “The predicate of this whole investigation was the evidence would tell the truth.”

Moreover, Blake discredited a ludicrous “deliberate” frame-up theory.⁴¹ LaGuer’s argument was not that his DNA was deliberately stolen two decades before DNA testing became a forensic tool. His claim was that Carignan left the MSPCL only with false police reports about these pilfered hairs and underclothes, thus, Grant did not (as he should have) individually preserved each specimen to international forensic guidelines.

In 2004, Blake was still defiant in his belief that “nobody took that position [of evidence tampering and contamination] prior to the testing.”⁴² As a matter of fact, eighteen months prior to the result ADA Joseph J Reilly did so: “[O]ne of the things the testing could tell us is whether or not there are signs of contamination which may lead us to conclude or may lead a court to conclude that there was tampering. It may have been advertent, it may have been inadvertent.”⁴³

The absence of her blood on perennial swabs and smears discredits the prosecution’s narrative of a continuous vaginal, oral, and anal assault lasting 8 hours. Dr. Edmond Meadows further undercut such a claim noting her “anus showed no blood, abrasions, or lacerations.” Her vaginal swabs only confirmed a “rare yeast” infection so advanced that in 1983 her nurse noted Plante was discharging a “yellowish” pus.⁴⁴ (Ben LaGuer was arrested 2 days later. He underwent a full medical exam at the Worcester County Jail where he remained locked up until his trial. The fact that LaGuer was not treated for a perineal infection exculpates him.)⁴⁵ Dean Wideman says, “If Mr. LaGuer in fact had sexual intercourse with [complainant], especially over an 8 hr period, it is very possible that biological materials would have been transferred from her vagina to his penis and then from his penis to his underwear.”⁴⁶ LaGuer’s underpants revealed no female yeast cells, blood, vaginal secretions or feces.⁴⁷

Grant reviewed all police reports. Patrolman Timothy E. Monahan quoted emergency room physician Dr. William C. Siegel in his police report as advising police to discard self-abuse because she had semen in her vagina and throat. Dr. Siegel has denied ever making this statement to the police. The defense proffers that instead of serological work, Grant simply affected Monahan’s fabricated sperm claim as his own analysis. How could Grant detect a 0.03 nanogram stain when nanoparticles could not be detected until the advent of DNA sequencing machines? According to Dr. Ed Blake, “Twenty years ago, scientists would not have been able to detect the evidence.”⁴⁸ MSPCL officials were unsure if the analysis was even performed.⁴⁹ Cellmark could not confirm if the stain was even spermatozoa.⁵⁰

Judge Timothy S. Hillman did not order an evidentiary hearing at the end of the disputed DNA report, as he should have, probably because he had previously been a lawyer to the complainant’s family.⁵¹ Michael Hillman, Judge Hillman’s younger brother, attended High School with complainant’s daughter. Tr. 5-7 (March 13, 2000, Volume 1).

Police photographed a scratch on his back.⁵² ADA Lemire never argued against LaGuer’s claim that he’d scratched himself on a picnic table.⁵² Lemire was afraid of other police photos showing that LaGuer’s left hand had no abrasions.⁵³ This evidence exculpates him.⁵⁴ Plante was hit so hard on the right side of her face that reconstructive surgery was considered.⁵⁵ (In Harper Lee’s classic novel To Kill a Mockingbird, the best argument for the accused rapist Jim Crow’s innocence is the bruises on the right side of the false accuser’s face; Crow had no use of his left arm since a childhood accident, and only a strong left-handed man could have dealt her those kinds of injuries.)

In October 1983, after four months of solitary confinement and a legal process that he believed was rigged, the arrival of Carignan was sent to the jail to collect a saliva sample for a blood typing test. LaGuer gave the saliva of another prisoner. While courts have frowned on his action,⁵⁶ the O Type perspiration on the culprit’s recovered tube sock would have exculpated a B type LaGuer.⁵⁷ Lemire had mistakenly speculated that LaGuer's bloodtype⁵⁸ would match the O Type perspiration on the sock.⁵⁹ In sum, LaGuer stood only to benefit by providing a genuine saliva sample.⁶⁰

In February 2002, responding to charges of missing evidence, DA Conte said: "Any and all evidence pertaining to this case that is held by the District Attorney's office has been, and will continue to be preserved."⁶¹ But a month earlier, Hautanen admitted that files and evidence previously in her office "aren't there anymore."⁶² The culprit's recovered tube sock and knife disappeared from custody. A set of fingerprints from a telephone and from a dryer disappeared.⁶³ A partial fingerprint of a Pepsi can disappeared.⁶⁴ In 2007, the SJC held "that the Commonwealth could not place [LaGuer] in the victim's apartment by means of any evidence, including fingerprints or any other physical evidence." One might ask not how does an American court sentence a man to life without a shred of physical evidence, but how so much physical evidence disappeared from the custody of prosecutors?

A Political Football Case for Many Years

After a highly critical four-part series in the Sentinel & Enterprise newspaper in August 1986, Leominster PD Chief Alan J Gallagher responded to a reporter, "You can't second guess a jury. You present the evidence to them and they decide." Raymond A Booth, president of the Patrolman's Union, said, the published reports "caused me to sit and think about it." the detective bureau ran "almost (as) a separate police operation."⁶⁵

LaGuer Does Not Fit a Psychological Profile

In a sentencing report to the trial judge, court appointed psychiatrist Dr. Lawrence Hipshman said, "LaGuer does not fit either a psychological nor pathological profile of a person capable of committing this crime." (Tr 611) On September 20, 2010, a nationally recognized evidence-based risk assessment tool -- Correctional Offender Management Profiling For Alternative Sanctions, scored him the lowest measurable risk (1 out of a 10 point scale) predictor for violence and recidivism.⁶⁶ In a second report, Department of Corrections psychiatrist Dr.

57 LaGuer's fear of submitting a saliva sample has a context of police discounting, distorting, and destroying evidence. In 2007, Hautanen argued to the SJC that LaGuer had thwarted their ability to inculcate him with a B Type bloodstain found near Plante. But Hautanen knew FSA had linked that blood to Plante. Her offering this discredited pretrial MSPCL report in 2007 only lends credence to LaGuer fears of false evidence.

58 See Commonwealth's Opposition to Motion for New Trial, 27 April 1989, indicating that LaGuer's "dog tags, the only evidence of his blood type apparently known at the time of trial, indicated that he was Type O blood." But only Carignan could have known about these dog tags. (Tr. 378)

59 Commonwealth's Motion for a Saliva Sample, allowed, 21 October 1983(Donohue, J.);

60 If ADA Lemire had argued that the B Type blood on the napkins inculcated LaGuer, an independent analysis (already requested in a letter to Lemire 24 October 1983) would have exposed the blood as actually her O-Type blood.

(Tr 610-611); Dr. Daniel Weiss, State Forensic Psychological Report, Not Sexually Dangerous Report of 22 May 1984

Daniel Weiss said, “In talking with him [LaGuer] at some length and in reading the report and trying to compare the action with his own history....it seems totally out of character that this man would have done it...he is not a sexually dangerous person and I recommend no further action on that question at this time.”

Challenges to the Conviction

In 1991 a challenge LaGuer launched to his conviction two years earlier went all the way to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court which rendered a landmark ruling in LaGuer's favor. In one affidavit, corroborated by the jury foreman,⁶⁷ one juror had remarked, “The goddamned spic is guilty just sitting there; look at him. Why bother having a trial?” The SJC asked the trial judge to afford LaGuer a new trial if the allegations were “essentially true.” After a hearing in which three jurors affirmed the racism, Judge Mulkern again ruled against LaGuer.⁶⁸ “A number of reporters have concluded that at the very least, his trial was a pretty odoriferous piece of business.”⁶⁹ When a reporter asked one of the twelve white jurors to reflect on the trial in 2001, juror Stephen J. Martin said, “The life sentence showed the judge agree with the verdict. We saw an animal, and he saw the same animal.”⁷⁰ Hautenen told the State Parole Board April 2010, “Perhaps there may have been a little jury bias in the courtroom. I think nobody really knows. What happens in a jury room is what happens in a jury room.”⁷¹

LaGuer earned a bachelors degree magna cum laude from Boston University and won a first place International PEN award for an essay on his mother. In 1998 LaGuer was for the first time eligible for parole but was denied because he refused to admit to the crime. At that point he attracted an unlikely ally in Boston University president and 1990 Democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, John Silber who helped arrange for pro bono legal representation. His team, which included members of McDermott, Will & Emery, the law firm William Weld, Silber's opponent in the governor's race.

LaGuer attracted another high powered international law firm, Goodwin Procter, where James C. Rehnquist, a partner at the firm took over LaGuer's case. In February 2004 Rehnquist filed a motion seeking a new trial on the basis of a Massachusetts State Police report generated the day LaGuer was arrested showing that four fingerprints found on the base of the trimline telephone, the cord of which was used to bind the victim's wrists, did not match LaGuer. “Serious questions have been raised concerning the handling of evidence in Mr. LaGuer’s case—questions that deserve serious consideration,” says state Senator Jarrett T. Barrios, chairman, Public Safety Committee, in a letter to Dr. Carl Selavka of the State Police crime lab.⁷² On March 23, 2007 the Supreme Judicial Court unanimously upheld LaGuer's conviction.

Political use of the LaGuer case in the Massachusetts Governor's race

In the fall of 2006 the LaGuer case became a dominant issue in the race between Republican Lieutenant Governor Kerry Healey and Democrat Deval Patrick when it was revealed that Patrick had petitioned the parole board in 1998 and 2000 for LaGuer's freedom and had contributed financially to the DNA testing. In his letters to the parole board Patrick characterized LaGuer as "thoughtful and eloquent."

2011 Developments

This case remains one of enormous legal, scientific and political consequences. This case is also a model case study for the necessity of establishing an Innocence Commission to investigate cases of factual innocence. The problem LaGuer still faces is one of lack political courage. The strategy of prosecutors will keep LaGuer in prison unless individuals in the legal, media, and academia undertake a serious investigation.

“A conspiracy is everything that ordinary life is not. It’s the inside game, cold, sure, undistracted, forever closed off to us. We are the flawed ones, the innocent, trying to make some rough sense of the daily jostle. Conspirators have a logic and daring beyond our reach. All conspiracies are the same taut story of individuals who find coherence in some criminal act.”

I have reviewed the contents of my files and can only locate the enclosed documents; the jury list and the pretrial conference report. I can only assume that anything else in my files was sent on to the attorney after me, Michael Caplette as I noticed a release and request from him and you that I send him my files. I do not know what the letter you refer to of October 24, 1983 contains."

Letter from Michael Caplette to Ben LaGuer of February 26, 2001 "Some of the items you are requesting, however, do not exist and others are clearly my work product, to which you are not entitled. Letter from Isaac Borenstein to Ben LaGuer of 20 November 2008 (“I am now familiar with the sequence of events that led to the DNA mishap. I am confident that we can argue that the DNA analysis provides evidence that actually contradicts the victim’s account, and therefore, additional exculpatory evidence for a new trial. This is an issue that may be developed in the courts, via a motion for a new trial, and in the arena of public opinion through the media. It is my judgment, based on everything I have read, that there is a very good argument to be made on your behalf that no future jury will be allowed to consider this evidence, which prosecutors have argued is reliable. It is my opinion that the DNA evidence fails to meet even basic Daubert—Lanigan admissibility criteria.”)

“A poll showed that the difference between Ms Healey’s vote and Deval L. Patrick’s could be accounted for by gender. Men were supporting Healey 42 percent to 40 percent, while woman supported Mr. Patrick 63 percent to 27 percent for Ms. Healey.” Comlumnist Kenneth J. Moynihan, Telegram & Gazette October 25, 2006

“What concerns me is that Deval Patrick would persist in describing and complimenting a convicted rapist as eloquent and thoughtful even after DNA evidence has proven beyond all doubt that in fact, Mr, LaGuer was convicted properly,” said Kerry Healey, Boston Herald, Laura Crimialdi, October 19, 2006

“This just wasn’t her race,” said famed democratic operative Michael Goldman of Kerry Healey’s gubernatorial bid. “Wrong candidate, wrong time, wrong message. Itfs a horrible thing to say, but look at her numbers. Ben LaGuer has higher favorability than she does,” Margery Eagen, Boston Herald, November 2, 2006.

“Anyone who claims to be a victim advocate or a champion for victim’s rights or even has the most remote understanding of victims1 issues would do this,” said Mary R. Lauby, executive director of Jane Doe, Inc, referring to Healey’s TV ad. Laura Criminaldi, Boston Herald, October 19, 2006.

“After seeing his medical records, he realized that, if he had given the authorities a legitimate saliva sample, the result would have provided evidence of his innocence rather than a false impression of guilt,” John Taylor, Esquire Magazine, May 1994

“Meanwhile, James Lemire, the former Worcester assistant district attorney who prosecuted the LaGuer case, was confirmed yesterday for s pot on the Superior court in a 6-1 vote by the Governor’s council. Questions about Lemire’s handling of the LaGuer case prompted the lone nay vote, from Councilor Peter Vickery (D-Amherst), Dave Wedge, Boston Herald October 5, 2006

“The father of California murder victim Polly Klaas visited Boston yesterday to speak out against Democratic candidate Deval L. Patrick, saying...” “I can’t even believe that this character is running for governor of this state...Every fiber of my being cries out to beware any individual who prioritizes the rights of a violent sexual sadist like Ben LaGuer ahead of the rights of a crime victim...” By Andrea Estes, Boston Globe, Father of slain Calif, girl criticizes Patrick, October 26, 2006

“Memo to the Healey campaign: Enough of the Benjamin LaGuer case, already. The incessant harping on what should have been a brief aside in the 2006 gubernatorial race has turned a largely substance-free campaign into a mudslinging match that ill-serves the Massachusetts electorate.” Editorial, Telegram & Gazette October 17, 2006

“It’s inconceivable Patrick simply forgot repeated correspondence with a convicted rapist, so the LaGuer issue is fair game. As authorities struggle to keep our streets safe, a legitimate debate over public safety is critical, too.” Editorial, Boston Herald, October 5, 2006

“For whatever reason, whatever motivation, whether conscience-drive or calculated, Patrick took such a leap, lending his credibility to LaGuer back when it was theoretically plausible that the latter was the victim of a monstrous injustice...He could have stood fast, digging his heels on principle, insisting that what he did seemed right when he did it, before he had the benefit all the hindsight critics are hurling at him now...Instead, in the heat of the moment, he's revealing what he is, 'eloquent and thoughtful' but just another empty suit." Columnist Joe Fitzgerald, Boston Herald, October 7, 2006

"I think our advertising spent a little too much time on Benjamin LaGuer and not enough time on the issues like, you know, the fact that income taxes are going to go up significantly under Deval Patrick," said Lt Gov. Kerry Healey's running mate Reed Hillman, blaming his team's crime focused TV ad for drooping poll numbers as election day loom." Boston Herald, Kimberly Atkins, November 1, 2006

Wedge, Dave. Boston Herald. 5 October 2006. ("Meanwhile, James Lemire, the former Worcester assistant district attorney who prosecuted the LaGuer, was confirmed yesterday for a spot on the Superior Court in a 6—1 vote by the Governor's Council. Questions about Lemire's handling of the LaGuer case prompted the lone nay vote, from Councilor Peter Vickery (D-Amherst).")

Crimaldi, Laura. Boston Herald. 19 October 2006. ("What concerns me is that deval Patrick would persist in describing and complimenting a convicted rapist as being eloquent and thoughtful even after DNA evidence has proven beyond all doubt that in fact, Mr. LaGuer was convicted properly," Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey said.")

Bruun, Matthew. Telegram & Gazette. 1 February 2007 B2. (Worcester District Attorney Joseph D. Early, Jr., said he will not request a specific audit of the Benjamin LaGuer case as investigators scrutinize the handling of DNA cases at the state police crime laboratory. . .The recent suspension of an administration at the crime lab because of improper handling of DNA proves there is a human factor that cannot be discounted, Mr. LaGuer said in a recent interview.. .Defense lawyer James C. Rehnquist sent a letter to Mr. Early last month asking him to review the case. ..'The conviction in the Benjamin LaGuer case was obtained without DNA testing by the Massachusetts State Police crime laboratory,' spokesman Timothy J. Connolly said...The state lab did not conduct the DNA analysis in his case, but Mr. LaGuer said lab personnel would have been responsible for handling and packaging material en route to testing.")

Editorial. Boston Globe. "Patrick's Missteps" 6 October 2006. A16. ('It would have been more surprising if Deval Patrick had not responded with interest to an appeal for support from a convicted rapist whose 1984 trial included racist remarks by a juror. Like former Boston University president John Silber, historian Elie Wiesel, and others, Patrick wrote letters on Benjamin LaGuer's behalf. This page editorialized for a new trial in 1994. Patrick's mistake this week was to say initially that there was only one letter, when it turned out there were more, as well as a contribution to the cost of a DNA test for the convict. The DNA test in 2002 provided evidence of LaGuer's guilt and Patrick has said he has played no role in the case since then. LaGuer contends the DNA evidence was contaminated and still proclaims his innocence...The court in which LaGuer was tried was tilted against him. The all white jury that convicted him included one members made racist comments, according to an affidavit by a fellow juror.")

Editorial, Telegram & Gazette 9 November 2009 (“The campaign also demonstrated that how the money is spent is more important than how much. Kerry M. Healey’s spending on ads linking Mr. Patrick to a convicted rapist not only was wasted, but also drove away many of the unenrolled voters and conservative Democrats on which a Healey victory hinged.”)

Telegram, Latest polls say Patrick leading by 25-27 points by John J. Monahan (“The poll indicated a significant shift toward Mr. Patrick and away from Ms. Healey, compared to results of a similar poll two weeks ago that put Mr. Patrick ahead by 13 points. Suffolk University Political Research Center Director David Paleologus said the poll appeared to reflect a public rejection of the Healey campaign ads.”)

Telegram, LaGuer rape issue ignored/Healey appears in Leominster by Jason Feifer 22 October 2006 (“On Friday, her campaign more than doubled the television airtime for a controversial new ad about Mr. Patrick and Mr. LaGuer, which features a woman walking through a dark parking garage.”)

Boston Herald, Torpedo tube: Ads win Healey points/Gurus say TV assault is working by Jessica Heslam (“UMass—Boston political science professor Paul Wannabe said Healey’s TV spots are ‘classic attack ads that ‘specifically raise questions about a person.’ ‘I think for her, it makes sense because in some ways Deval Patrick has proven to be immune from being hurt by distinctions on policy issues,’ Watanabe said.”)

Moynihan, Kenneth, J. Hard to believe many will buy into Kerry Healey’s attack. 11 October 2006. (“The Patrick campaign goofed by not being prepared for the LaGuer question. A number of upright citizens favored a new trial for the convicted rapist back in the 1980s, but only one of them is currently the Democratic nominee for governor in Massachusetts. Mr. Patrick was not ready for the question, and as a result gave out inaccurate information when it was first raised. It took a few costly days to do the research and set the record straight. The candidate said very correctly, “The point is, we screwed up in terms of how we handled doing our homework before we answered questions about this issue. No question about that.” T&G)

Estes, Andrea. Boston Globe. Healey, Patrick duel on crime. 5 October 2006. (“Patrick, who also corresponded with LaGuer in the late 1990s, said yesterday, ‘I am proud of what I did.’ Asked whether he would still advocate on LaGuer’s behalf ‘knowing what you know now,’ he said yes. Patrick did not elaborate. Later, an aide explained that Patrick would advocate for LaGuer again because he may not have received a fair trial.”)

Estes, Andrea, Patrick apologizes for disclosure missteps 6 October 2006. (“Patrick told reporters he should have researched his involvement in the case before offering statements over the past week that minimized his role. ‘We screwed up in terms of how we have handled doing the homework before we answered questions about this issue, no question about that. And I take the responsibility for that.’ Patrick said he was ‘proud of what I did’ and would do it again. ‘I don’t think it was a mistake.’”)

Atkins, Kimberly. Ask her to step down as chair of violence council. Boston Herald. 31 October 2006 ("In a politically charged slap one week before the election, members of the Governor's Commission on Sexual and Domestic Violence — most hiding behind anonymity -- yesterday called for Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey to step down as the group's chairwoman. In a letter to Healey, the commission members and advisers said her attacks on Democrat Deval Patrick for backing convicted rapist Ben LaGuer create unfounded fears... 'This ad perpetuates three damaging myths; first, the only women are at risk for sexual violence; second, that strangers — particularly those who come from communities of color — are those who should be feared the most ; and third, that rapist are visibly unsavory individuals,' said the letter.")

Payne, Dan. Tactics for desperate times. Boston Globe ("Ka—boom! Implosion you heard is collapse of Healey candidacy. Two TV polls have her now trailing by 27 and 25 points. Her unfavorable is above 50 percent. It's over. Kerry Healey's lurid ad about rape of white woman in parking garage has strong racial undertones. Using reality—style surveillance camera, spot uses racial stereotype of lone white woman about to be jumbed by black rapist lurking behind cars. What it reveals is a desperate Healey using fear to mug Deval Patrick in dark, offensive, and racist TV commercial. For weeks, her slogan has been 'It's about race, stupid.' Washington Post blog's review gubernatorial ads from around country called garage spot 'as vicious as we're seen.'")

Phillips, Frank. Boston Globe. Healey keeps up attack; Patrick toughens his ad. 11 October 2006. ("Patrick's advisers, who would not speak for attribution because they do not publicly discuss strategy, said polling data from the weekend showed that Healey's attack ads have backfired by hurting her own standing among voters more than Patrick's. The advisers said Patrick and his aides decided not to launch a negative counteroffensive.")

Dukakis, who gave you the job in 1991 after having run a dismal and losing 1988 presidential campaign. Patrick didn't just win. He pounded his Republican opponent, Kerry Healey, in a landslide, garnering 56 percent of the vote in a state where African Americans make up just under 7 percent of the population. Moreover, he defeated Healey after her own attempts to point him as a weak knee sellout lawyer backfire. Central to her campaign were ads that focused on Patrick's 2002 defense of a jailed Puerto Rican felon named Benjamin LaGuer, who was convicted of raping a fifty nine year old white woman in her Leominster apartment. Patrick contributed $5,000 to a defense fund that paid for DNA tests intended to exonerate LaGuer. Instead, they linked him to the crime.. .The perception that Healey had run a racist campaign may also have helped Patrick in the black community, where he was largely unknown. There is nothing like a perceived attack from an outsider to make otherwise warring insiders bank together.” p180, 188.)

Statement from Deval Patrick on his role in the case of Ben LaGuer 28 September 2006 (“My sole involvement in this case was more than 10 years ago, when I wrote a letter on Mr. LaGuer’s behalf. At the time, there were serious unanswered issues concerning the facts and fairness of the original trial.” On that basis, I stated my belief that the criminal justice system should have taken a further look at Mr. LaGuer’s case--a viewed shared by The Boston Globe, John Silber, and many others in the state. DNA testing, at that time, had never been conducted.’ ‘In light of today’s news stories, I have reviewed the case today and was updated on developments since my letter more than ten years ago. (Broadway Books, 2011)(“In another matter, I had urged Massachusetts to conduct a DNA test on a convicted rapist whose guilt seemed in doubt. So another attack ad cast me as a friend of sexual predators and played into racist fears about black men and white women: The camera followed a woman walking through a dark garage, then viewers heard an interview with me in which I described the prisoner, with whom I had exchange letters, as ‘thoughtful.’ The voiceover said, ‘Have you ever heard a woman compliment a rapist?’ (For the record, the DNA test confirmed the man’s guilt.) I had a campaign staff and a cadre of energetic volunteers to help me with this nonsense, but it took its toll.” pp 179)
